Current WOT News

WOT grows and changes

Thanks to our active rating community, WOT is one of the most essential browser add-ons for Firefox and Internet Explorer. We have recently surpassed six million downloads and gained a new valuable partner in the computer security space, Panda Security.

With the growth of our small business, we decided that now would be a good time to make a name change that reflects the brand we are building. Our new company name is WOT Services Ltd., and it replaces Against Intuition Inc.

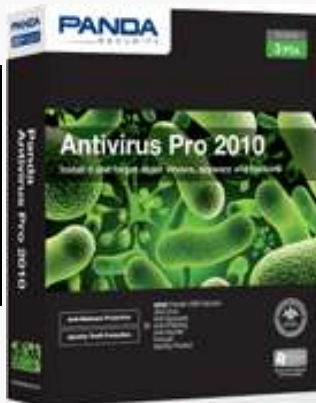

To reflect our global community, we have changed the look and layout of the WOT homepage. Check out the WOT in numbers section. This map shows the requests coming to the WOT servers from each continent hourly. As I write this, Europe is in the middle of their work day, Asia is having dinner, and the USA is yawning and hitting the snooze button.

WOT HQ has a tiny but talented staff who, as people in small businesses must, wear many hats. This month we bid a fond farewell, to the man who wore the captain's hat for almost two years, WOT's CEO, Esa Suurio. Esa's creative guidance brought WOT to the success we now enjoy and he will be sorely missed.

What's really important

Our active community is WOT's most important asset and even though we celebrate the number of downloads, think about branding and design, and have changes in leadership, we realize that it's you who makes WOT truly successful. Reputation ratings come from regular people who want to share their experiences on the Web—positive and negative—so others will be safe. As WOT grows and changes, we pledge to you that our first priority will always be our users. WOT wouldn't be so successful if it wasn't for you. Thank you.

WOT Wiki

Our community asked for a WOT wiki, and we have delivered. If you are a registered member of WOT, you have access to the new WOT wiki. There is not much structure yet, but with the collaborative help of our community, we can build a wiki that expands the information we have on our website. Start right away on <http://www.mywot.com/wiki>

Translation feature

The WOT community speaks different languages, but we all share the same goal of keeping the Internet safe. To ease communication between our users, we have added a "translate" link for scorecard comments and postings on the WOT blog and forum. It works when the comment is written in a different language than the site's language. All you do is click on the translate link once and it replaces the comment with a translation. Clicking it again restores the original comment. This clever addition uses the Google Translation API.

When writing comments in any language, please consider the following:

- Be objective and truthful. Useful comments include not only whether you liked or disliked a site, service or product, but also why.
 - Differentiate between the technical safety of the site and the content
 - Support your assertions or statements
 - Try to keep it short, but focused
- Avoid these:
- Obscenities, discriminatory language or other language not suitable for a public forum
 - Advertisements or "spam" content
 - Email addresses, phone numbers, physical addresses or other forms of contact information
 - Critical or spiteful comments on other comments posted on the page or their authors

Examples of good comments:

Puzzle Pirates is a fun game, it's child friendly, and it has a great support team. ~ from scorecard

Great website for searching through multiple book providing websites. Wonderful for college students, a must have for finding cheap used books :) And it is safe, no account needed, just a search engine to help us. ~ from scorecard

Browser exploit : When I created an account, they asked for me to allow them to access my e-mail accounts, but it wasn't required ... ~ from scorecard

I was scammed big time from mailsmoney.net, I did the upgrade to the tune of $200.00 . The Upgrade was to include a new laptop pc. sent out within 24 hours, 200 referrals in my downline, and I could cash out anytime. yea right. Dumb me, I fell for it all... ~ from scorecard

This forum provide lots of informative tutorials and guides! ~ from scorecard

WOT on the Web

Every Friday In Germany, computer expert Jörg reports about current trends and innovations from the world of computers on the TV show Angeklickt (Clicked). WOT welcomes all of our new German users who came to know us from this show. Thanks, Jörg!

Respected technology magazine, PC Mag, wrote a quick review of WOT in August. Overall it was good, and we are happy to be featured on such a popular website. The slideshow is fantastic, and author Neil J. Rubenking explains the value of WOT, "the more users participate, the more accurate and useful Web of Trust is."

PhishTank is one of WOT's trusted sources and friends. Together our communities are battling phishing and spam. You can help your fellow web users and fight phishers through submitting data directly to PhishTank. Help the fight against phishing with Phishtank tells you how.

Security company, Symantec, released a list of the "Dirtiest Web Sites of Summer 2009" recently. Matthew at geek.com explains that these are websites that pose the greatest risk to users if visited, and while the usual suspects show up, there are also some surprises. His reputation solution of choice is WOT. See a sample list here.

Just in time for back to school—The WOT Plug-in for Firefox is recommended in an informative blog maintained by students at Globe University / Minnesota School of Business. WOT users know how WOT can help keep their browsing safe. Please let the Technology Specialist and IT people at your school know you would like WOT in campus computer labs and libraries.

Ask WOT

When I click on WOT rating icons in my email, it takes me to the WOT pages. Is WOT spamming me?

No way! We don't spam. It's just WOT doing it's job.

Some of our users don't realize that WOT also works in the most popular web-based email programs. WOT icons show beside links in Gmail, Yahoo! mail or Windows Live Hotmail just like they do in a search. Just like in a search, the links and the email do not originate from WOT.

Hover your mouse over the icon for a rating summary; or click the icon and the WOT scorecard for the site opens, showing the rating details.

WOT's rating protection works in these email programs to protect you from potential spam and phishing attacks.
