Mozilla recommends WOT add-on

WOT is honored to be a Mozilla recommended add-on for July. Each month, Mozilla examines the performance of add-ons by number of users and retention level. Those add-ons with the best overall performance stay on the list. Please share WOT with friends and family so we can stay the whole summer.

New WOT homepage debuts

The big news from WOT HQ this month is the unveiling of our new homepage. No doubt you've already admired it, but if you haven't, visit the WOT homepage now.

Our goal was to make the page more relevant, useful and interesting to the WOT community and new visitors. Let us know your thoughts, and if you have any suggestions, we'd like to hear from you on our forum discussion.

You'll find a variety of free WOT badges and the WOT widget on the Friends page. Place these on your website or blog to show your visitors that you promote Internet safety and that your site has a high reputation. To become a Friend, please email us at friend@mywot.com.

WOT on the Web

WOT videos have been popping up lately on YouTube. Reprotected, one of WOT's most active users, has created a video entitled SiteAdvisor vs. MyWOT where he presents the advantages and disadvantages of both rating systems, accompanied by a catchy soundtrack. Thank you, Reprotected.

Friends of WOT, 8 falcons and ISQ, have created computer security training videos, appropriate for use in the workplace. The four-part series, include videos on information security guidelines, working from home, using WOT and child safety online.

WOT fan video on YouTube

Thanks to Colin over at Free PC Security for the great write-up and "How to Use WOT" video, also on YouTube. Free PC Security tests programs and utilities so you will have a safer and more secure time when surfing the Internet. When you visit his site, you'll notice that he is displaying a Friend of WOT badge and logo. Get one for your site at Friends of WOT.

Do you Twitter? Twitter is a micro-blogging site that can be used on the Internet or your mobile phone. The fun and challenge is in the format; send text-based messages (tweets) in the space of 140 characters.

The new Internet security news section on our homepage uses a Twitter feed. Sign up for Twitter and start following Esa and Deborah.

A world record was set on June 18 after more than 8 million people downloaded Firefox 3 browser. WOT saw a spike in downloads of our addon too: downloads increased by 67% on June 18 compared to the day before. A number that has remained steady over the first half of this year is WOT members who have adopted Firefox as their browser— a whopping 75% of you prefer Firefox over IE.
